

Once Upon a Time, there was a little blue girl who lived in a copious green mansion. She always wore a red bow in her black hair and she always wore green shoes.

She had five petite dogs: Biscuit and Bowser were both red and hairy, while Gertrude, Salt, and Pepper were black with blue spots. They always hung out in the large green yard that was surrounded by a white picket fence.

Adjacent to her house was her crimson garage. Inside, was a little black car that had a dent in the back passenger-side bumper.

She had a black mailbox at the end of the diminutive driveway that was saying she had a letter to mail.

In front of the white picket fence were some yellow tulips with green stems that grew in a serpentine fashion.

The little blue girl was happy with her comfy home but was lonely as well. No one ever came to visit her. She lived her days away in that house hoping that he would one day respond.
